One thing to be said about the new German cabinet is that it is composed of distinctly German names.

Henry Ford's comment on Newberry's resignation from the Senate has thus far been withheld. Ford's or somebody's good sense interposed.

Pennsylvania shippers are sending coal to western points in sealed box cars. Perhaps the western people are merely trying to get back at the coal operators through similar methods.

A Reno woman who declared that food did not agree with her and would eventually kill her has just died of self-imposed fasting. It killed her by reason of the fact that she didn't eat it. Therefore, she proved herself a good prophet.

After starting the machinery for a recount of the Massachusetts votes for United States senator, William A. Gaston runs off to Europe on a pleasure tour. His flight does not indicate a marked degree of interest in the outcome of the recount.

Lausanne is pronounced almost as a lost hope as far as real peace in the Near East is concerned. However, the old saying that getting the other fellow's viewpoint helps toward understanding applies in this very much muddled case. At least the viewpoint may be clearer after the Lausanne conference.

A Winthrop, Mass., woman left a handbag, containing $1,500 in various securities, in a Boston street car. Some time later she began a search for the property and soon had it restored to her through the agency of a street car employee and the officers of the company. The restoration shines forth a good deed in a naughty world.

Late returns to the Vermont legislative reference bureau show that several more Democrats than originally reported were elected to the Vermont legislature. Their elections in most instances were probably due to several aspirants among the Republicans. When the Republicans get to squabbling, then the Democrats find their chance here in Vermont.

Mrs. W. H. Felton of Georgia, the "first woman senator" to take a seat at Washington, might, perhaps, have felt a greater sense of satisfaction if she could have taken that seat in regularly established manner rather than through an interim appointment, which smacked a great deal of the game of politics personally played by the appointing power. Nominally, Mrs. Felton is the first woman to hold a seat in the United States Senate, but it is more or less of an empty honor, under the conditions.

Suit by a Worcester, Mass., man against the Pullman company for damages because he contracted chronic bronchitis while occupying an upper berth of a sleeping car opens a wide field of litigation. In the case in hand, the plaintiff claims that a hole in the side of the car let in the draught so that he contracted the sickness. A good many people lay their ills to conditions they find in a sleeping car; they overlook the fact that they cannot expect all the comforts of home, or even of a first-class hotel, in a moving public conveyance. There are marked limitations to a sleeping car.

It is evident thus early in his career as premier of Italy that Benito Mussolini is out of the ordinary as a diplomat. He talks right out from the shoulder and does not mince matters in the least whether the matters have to do with internal affairs of his country or with such delicate a thing as the relations of the allies to Germany and the uncollected reparations. In due time, Mussolini may change his methods; but for the present he is considerable of an oddity in diplomatic circles. However, that is not to say that his open front is not rather pleasing after the veiled stuff we generally get from the leaders of various governments.

THE BLINDNESS OF PREJUDICE.

Exemplification of how far blind prejudice may carry the public mind was given at Windsor, Ontario, one day recently when several truckloads of a Detroit Sunday newspaper arrived in Windsor. It seems that the newspaper in question had previously published an article giving the statement of the former German crown prince that the American army defeated Germany in the World war. Feeling that the credit was improperly placed, the Canadian veterans of the war became so violently enraged that they took out their spite on the newspaper, which had printed the article, overlooking the fact that the statement was not made by the newspaper but by the former German crown prince. The Canadian veterans endeavored to have the Canadian department of customs bar the Detroit paper, but that department took the ground that the article on who beat Germany was harmless and refused to bar the newspaper from Canada. Taking matters into their own hands then, the Canadian veterans and their sympathizers met the trucks bearing the Detroit Sunday newspaper, seized the bundles of newspapers, scattered them in the streets and hurled some into the Detroit river. It was mob rule with a vengeance; yet the Detroit newspaper was entirely within its rights in printing a statement credited to someone else. Perhaps when they cool off somewhat, the Canadian veterans through their organization will repudiate the mob action of their fellows at Windsor and at least make an apology to the Detroit newspaper.

Some people have the mistaken idea that nothing should be printed in the newspapers except that which accords with their own views. Those same people or some others with equally narrow viewpoint rush to the newspapers with exploits setting forth their own virtue but expect the newspapers to refrain from printing anything except what is laudatory about them. They are extremely one-sided and unfair. So was the Windsor mob.

CURRENT COMMENT

New Candidate for Speaker.

The entry of H. Albon Bailey of Winoski into the speakership contest brings a very strong contender forward from the "west side." Representative Bailey has shown what he can do as a campaigner in his own town and will undoubtedly carry with him a very considerable strength in Chittenden, Franklin, Lamoille and Addison counties. At the same time, many of those who watched Albon Bailey's career in the legislature of 1921 believe that he would be of much more value to his constituents and to the state as the head of some important and active committee and through his work as a floor leader. This young man has the elements of leadership, but it does not follow that he is fitted for the more or less routine work of the speakership.—Rutland Herald.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

"Mother of Six" Speaks.

Editor, Barre Times: In reply to the disgusted woman voter, I would also like to express my opinion on the election.

First, I would like to ask if both candidates did not have the same chance to hurry and scurry? The result was that the one who got the majority was elected, as is always the case with election. The better, I dare say, felt that he was capable of answering the important questions before filing his name as a candidate, and if his people had not confidence in him he would not have had their support.

As to women with babies, the aged and crippled, had they not as much right to vote as our disgusted female voter, who perhaps was never blessed with little ones or is so fortunate as to be young and spry? They were called upon to help and gladly dropped their work to go and vote to the best of their ability. No doubt they knew as much about voting as the disgusted woman.

Congratulations for the new representative. May he do as good, or better work for our town and state as the one who has been there before for the young, mothers, aged and crippled. Let us show respect and sympathy. A Mother of Six.

Don't Envy Them

DO YOU ENVY some neighbor who seems to be getting along a little better than you do?

The chances are that his success is due to some special plan which you can adopt with equal success. Your neighbor's bank account is the result of many small deposits made often. That plan is easy but it pays handsomely.

There are many people passing the bank every day with money in their pockets that might easily be put to interest, because the amount is small it is not saved. We always welcome the small regular deposits of all who are willing to adopt this system—it means sure success in due time.

Think it over.

Household Bank Accounts

The management of household finances ought to be a business matter. The member of the family who looks after the expenses and pays the bills should have a bank account. Paying bills by check gives one an accurate record of where the money goes, and cancelled checks, which the bank returns, are receipts for all money paid. We have a large number of household accounts and would welcome yours.
